THE ETON WALL GAME

Eton College is one of Britain's oldest and most prestigious public schools. The school has some very old traditions. One example is the Wall Game: a sport the school plays to celebrate St. Andrew's Day, on 30th November. Eton is located about 30 kilometres west of London. The school is in the village of Eton on the River Thames, opposite Windsor.

The Wall Game is only played at Eton. It is one of the oldest versions of football. Two teams play the game on a field beside a wall, enclosed in 111. The field is 100 metres long and 5 metres wide. The players score points by pushing their team and the ball to one end of the field. Players cannot touch the ball with their hands. The players' goal is to push the ball in between their own bodies. It isn't a very spectacular sport, in fact, games regularly finish 0-0. But it is considered among the 'Duke of Edinburgh' a similar one. Etonian, separately, says that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton.

The Wall Game teams are called the Colleges and the Opponents. Why? We need a short history lesson. King Henry VI founded the school as a charity in 1440. The first students were 70 poor children. They were the King's scholars. They were also called Colleges because they lived in Eton College. Eton still awards 70 scholarships. However, Eton College is now one of 24 Eton houses. The Opponents are students from the other 24 houses. They pay school fees. Today Eton is an expensive private school with more than a thousand students.

Eton remains a powerful force in British culture. It has produced many prime ministers, including David Cameron. Both Prince William and Prince Harry attended the school. In fact, Prince Harry played the Wall Game in 2001. Other famous Old Etonians included George Orwell, the fictional James Bond and his creator Ian Fleming, and Hugh Laurie (Dr. House).
